Racine has a population of 15,500. It claimed 20,000.

The mud batteries have been silent for several days. Are the Democrats out of ammunition?

New wheat has already reached Chicago. The quality is good and the yield per acre excellent.

Harmony and enthusiasm are the staying qualities of the Republican party in the canvass of 1880.

Judge Davis can now retire with Tilden. Neither was strong enough to attract Presidential lightning.

Tilden believes in a still hunt—he is still hunting for a place to hide himself from the laugh of the people at his calamity.

Before the morning of the election, the Democratic party will wake up and find that after all that their "soldier" candidate will not sweep the country.

The Democrats could not have nominated a candidate who could be distrusted. Whoever is put up by the rebel brigadiers and Northern Bourbons, will be looked upon with suspicion.

There are six political biographies of Mr. Garfield already in preparation, and all will be out within thirty days. Some of these are in the hands of the best literary authors in the United States.

The Democrats have two bitter pills to swallow in this campaign—the remarkable harmony in the Republican party, and the eminent position of statesmanship which the Republican candidate has reached.

When Chicago was laid in ashes in 1871, and tens of thousands of people were destitute and homeless, appeals went forth to all parts of the country for help. When these sad appeals reached the ears of William H. English, the Democratic candidate for Vice President, he opened his heart and purse, and gave one dollar.

The more the people watch the freaks of the Democratic conventions and read their platforms, the more they are convinced the party and the leaders are without principle or policy. Four years ago the National Democratic platform denounced the resumption act and honest money. Now the National platform endorses hard money, and credits the party with bringing about resumption! Then it demanded the abolition of all national banks, and now it is silent on the subject. This shows that the Democratic party changes its principles to suit its partisan purposes.

The Harper's Weekly of this week contains some very fine illustrations of the obelisk which will soon be in this country. It also publishes a narrative of the enterprise which can not fail to prove both interesting and profitable. It is generally known that Mr. William H. Vanderbilt, of New York, defrays the expenses of removing the obelisk from Alexandria, Egypt, to New York City, where it will enrich Central Park. The cost of removal is many thousands of dollars, and a large force of help was needed to take the needle down, and a vessel has been engaged for the special purpose of bringing it to this country. It is also said that the preliminary business connected with the removing of the famous Cleopatra's needle, was managed by the New York World newspaper, free of cost. The vessel containing this precious relic of antiquity had got as far as Gibraltar some days ago. It will be several weeks before the obelisk reaches New York. For the particulars regarding the presentation of the gift of the Khedive of Egypt to the people of the United States, the reader is referred to the excellent article in the Harper's.

THE JANESVILLE GAZETTE.

VOLUME 24 — JANESVILLE, WISCONSIN, SATURDAY, JUNE 26, 1880. — NUMBER 95

It seems that the Democrats have nearly freed their minds regarding Mr. Garfield. He had not been nominated forty-eight hours before the Democratic papers began to pour out their wrath upon him in the shape of charges of complicity in the Credit Mobilier. Papers which make a business of trading a scandal and dealing in blackguardism, were in political clover for a few days. The condition of the Democracy on this question is well illustrated by an anecdote of Horace Greeley, related by the New York Tribune, a short time ago. Once during a campaign a person who took exceptions to something that had appeared in the Tribune, and who had a vigorous vocabulary of speech, called on Mr. Greeley in a high state of excitement and proceeded to give his opinion of the newspaper and the editor in a flux of profane pyrotechnics which ran from a simple "dammit" up to polysyllabic blasphemy, and continued uninterruptedly for about fifteen minutes, when, the resources of the tongue having been thoroughly exhausted, he paused a moment, and getting no answer turned to go. At this Mr. Greeley, who all the time had kept on writing, with his face close down to his desk, apparently paying no attention, looked up, and turning his benignant countenance upon the wrathful visitor, said with his peculiar tone: "Oh, don't go; sit down, and stay a little while, and free your mind." The nomination of Garfield was so unexpected and so little desired by the Democrats, that they must have a "blow out" before they can calm themselves and free their minds.

THE LATE CIPHER CANDIDATE.

The resolution of Samuel J Tilden not again to be a candidate for the exalted place to which he was elected by a majority of his countrymen and from which he was excluded by the leaders of the Republican party, is received by the Democrats of the United States with deep sensibility and they declare their confidence in his wisdom, patriotism and integrity, unshaken by the assaults of the common enemy, and they further assure him that he is followed into the retirement he has chosen for himself by the sympathy and respect of his fellow citizens who regard him as one who, by elevating the standard of public morality and adorning and purifying the public service, merits the lasting gratitude of his country and his party.

The above is one of the planks in the National Democratic platform adopted at Cincinnati. In all the political annals of this country there can not be found greater inconsistencies than the professed belief among the Democrats that Mr. Tilden was elected in 1876, and the act of the Cincinnati Convention, in defiance of justice, in forever retiring him to private life. The Convention can not say that its action was governed by Mr. Tilden's adroit letter, for that letter upon its very face, was nothing less than a bid for the nomination. Its real purpose was not to prevent the use of his name at Cincinnati, but to increase his chances of success. But however that may be, the Cincinnati Convention stultified itself by allowing Mr. Tilden to be laid aside.

If the Convention believed that Tilden was rightfully elected in 1876, it was in duty bound to give him a nomination in 1880. It was in duty bound not only to present his case to the people of the United States, but to place him again before the people for vindication. It is no answer to this to say that he pretended to withdraw. The Democrats have cried fraud from 1876 till now. They have claimed that Mr. Tilden was elected, and was cheated out of the office by Republican Returning Boards and the Electoral Commission. Viewing his case from this standpoint, the Convention could not nominate anybody else and continued to claim that Mr. Tilden was rightfully elected in 1876. By refusing to renominate him and give him a chance to vindicate himself and to gain the high office to which he and the party claim he was elected, they confess before the world, that Samuel J. Tilden was not elected in 1876, and that his connection with the cipher frauds during the contest in the winter of 1876-7, made his election impossible.

The resolution adopted by the Convention in regard to Mr. Tilden placed that body in a more humiliating position than ever. After refusing to recognize his right to a renomination, it resolves that he was elected to the Presidency by a large majority of his countrymen, and that "the Democrats of the United States declare their confidence in his wisdom, patriotism, and integrity." Here is insult upon injury. Here is pretended confidence and sympathy in an hour when Mr. Tilden needed both at the hands of the Cincinnati Convention. But while resolving that he had wisdom, patriotism, integrity, and was rightfully elected four years ago, the Convention turns stealthily upon him to give the martyr candidate a mortal stab!

Poor Tilden! He found his Brutus in the Cincinnati Convention. The entire Convention—the men who resolved that he had "wisdom, patriotism, integrity, and was once elected to the Presidency," took part in his political assassination.

No matter what of age, and failing health, and party dissensions and availability, and the hundreds of specious excuses which suggest themselves, history will write it now that he failed to get the nomination, that his party knew his pretentions to be false, knew him to be the father of the cipher dispatches, and of all the disgusting schemes to steal the Presidency, knew him to be a political thief and hypocrite and did not dare to place him before people. His party does not believe in him notwithstanding the resolution we print at the beginning of this article, and it dared not nominate him.

This is the last of Samuel J. Tilden. His political stab is mortal. In the house of his friends he felt the keen thrust of the dagger. He passes out of the confidence of the people, and goes down in history as the most corrupt political leader of modern times.

THE TRIPLE TRAP.

The Execution of Ohr, Mann and Sammet at Canton, Ohio.

CANTON, Ohio, June 25—George Mann, Gustave Ohr and John Sammet, the three boy murderers of Canton, are dead, the drop falling in Canton jail at 11:40 this morning. Sheriff Alterkruse did the job well. The streets of the town were livelier than any in Ohio this morning, a circus adding to the horrible exciting attractions. Around the jail were gathered thousands of people, only prevented from forcing an entrance through the stout walls by the fixed bayonets and loaded guns of five companies of militia. The prisoners slept from 4 to 7 this morning, and were game through and through. They ate a hearty breakfast at 7 and dined at 10. Mann's grandmother stayed all night with him, and took her final farewell of him at 10. The poor old woman went nearly frantic with grief, and it was a difficult thing to get her away from the jail. After she had gone Mann broke down and a physician was called in who gave him some stimulants, which had the desired effect. Ohr and Sammet needed no bracing. They whiled the morning away in smoking, listening to spiritual comfort, and in bidding their friends and relatives their last adieu.

Shortly after 10 o'clock, Mann threw himself at the feet of Ohr, and plead for him to say he was not guilty, Ohr told him that he could not tell a falsehood, and that he could not say he was innocent. Mann, it was feared, would be seized with an epileptic fit, which he is subject to, but fortunately he was not.

When led upon the scaffold, Ohr and Sammet talked to the dozen spectators, and bid them good-by. Father Thorpe and Vottman, and the Rev. Mr. Kuenz, of the Evangelical Lutheran Church, accompanied the lads, standing behind them on the scaffold. In the jail corridor the prisoners were attired in their ordinary suits, white neckties, and an appropriate button hole bouquets.

"The rope is too tight," said Sammet, as the noose was adjusted.

"Good by, grandma," shrieked Mann, and all was over.

The necks of Sammet and Ohr were broken. Mann's heart ceased to beat in eight minutes, Sammet's in ten, and Ohr's in thirteen and one-third.

The throng outside, learning it was over, adjourned to the circus, giving the soldiers an opportunity to gaze at the ghastly bodies after they had been placed in the hallway of the jail.

Ohr was taken to a private burying ground, Mann to the Catholic cemetery and Sammet to Massillon Cemetery. No execution in Ohio for years has caused such an excitement as has been caused by this tripple affair.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 25—Hayden Brown, who murdered his wife's mother over a year ago, was hanged at Huntsville, Mo., this afternoon, in the presence of a great crowd. Brown ascended the scoffold at 1:10 p. m., and, after religious services by the Rev. Mr. Ettington, of the Methodist church, he stepped forward and made quite a speech to the crowd in attendance. He said: "If you will keep still one minute I will talk to you in regard to my poor dead child and wife. To every man, woman and child I want to say that I have nothing against you, and hope you will all have forgiven me. May God have mercy to-day on me and all of you. I stand to-day on the gallows to pay the penalty of the crime. To the young, many of whom I recognize, I want to say, I saw them riding out here to-day drunk. I have done the same thing myself, and you see where I am."

He asked to be buried with his wife, and held in his hand a bouquet, and asked if there was a lady who would see that it was put in his wife's dear little hands. "I want," he said, "to see who will do it." Many hands were raised, by the women, and the cry of "Here, here," came from every quarter. Brown asked all the relatives of his wife who were present to raise their hands in token of forgiveness.

One of the dead woman's sisters was present, and raised her hand. Brown said, "Thank God, there is one." The culprit then stepped on the trap. The black cap was put on, the rope adjusted, the trap was sprung, and poor Brown's soul was launched on the sea of eternity at 1:28 p. m. His neck was broken. He died in about ten minutes, without a struggle.

HANCOCK AS A SOLDIER.

His Famous Campaign Against the Cheyennes—Two Indians Killed at $1,500,000 Apiece.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 25—The Northern Democratic newspapers to-day teem with a counts of Gen. Hancock's military achievements during the War of the Rebellion. Not a word is said, however, about Hancock's active military campaign, the only one, too, in which he ever had an opportunity, as an independent commander, to display his bright military qualities. That was the campaign against the Cheyenne Indians in Kansas in the spring and summer of 1867. In conversation with a Tribune correspondent to-night, Col S F Tappan, who was a member of the Indian Peace Commission of 1867, recalled some of the incidents of that famous campaign. "In April" said the Colonel, "Hancock marched from Leavenworth with an expedition of 1,500 men. Some of the equipment of that expedition excited much curiosity and amusement among those of us who had served in that country. For example, an elaborate pontoon train was taken along for a campaign in a region where there is not a stream that is easily fordable. A long train of water carts also accompanied the expedition, and it has been irreverently suggested by soldiers who were not educated at West Point that the water carts might be needed to hold a supply of water sufficient to make the pontoons useless. When the expedition reached Fort Larned a body of Cheyennes, numbering 400 warriors, with their women, children, and old men, were encamped on the Pawnee fork, about fifteen miles distant. On General Hancock's invitation the chiefs and warriors came to Fort Larned for a conference. General Hancock asked them where their women and children were, and why they had not come in. He was told that among the women were many who had escaped the Chivington massacre at Sand Creek, and they were afraid to come near the soldiers. General Hancock insisted that the women and children should be brought to the fort. The warriors returned to their village, and taking their women and children fled from the vicinity. The village was then attacked by the troops, its only occupants being an old man and a demented girl, who had been forgotten by the Indians in their hasty flight. These two Indians were murdered, but not until after the girl had been outraged, and the village was burned, except 500 of the tepees, which were reserved for officers of the expedition. Then an active campaign against the Indians was begun. It lasted until some time in July, when General Hancock sent to Washington for more men and money. He had spent about $9,000,000 and the lives of about soldiers and settlers had been sacrificed. Congress decided that $1,500,000 for killing an Indian was too much, and the Peace Commission was appointed. General Hancock was examined as a witness before the Commission early in August, and he made a very pitiable exhibition of himself in trying to excuse his blunders. The Commission met the Cheyennes in September, and readily concluded a treaty with them. General Hancock's campaign was an unnecessary as well as an expensive one, and its management from beginning to end reflected no credit on the commander."

ANOTHER FALSEHOOD.

General Grant Publicly States His Political Preferences.

GALENA, Ill., June 25—A dispatch was received in Galena to-day, from New York, announcing that one of the morning papers of that city had published the statement that General Grant, on receiving the news of the nomination of Hancock by the Democratic Convention, immediately pronounced in favor of Hancock, and in the presence of several friends declared that he (Grant) was released from obligation to the Republican party, and would vote for the nominee heading the Democratic ticket. The dispatch was shown General Grant this afternoon by your correspondent, and the former denounced the statement as a malicious fabrication, without the least foundation in truth whatever.

DUBUQUE, June 25—The statement published in the evening papers, sent from New York that General Grant had said that he would support Hancock, is said by the General false in every particular, as he so stated this evening to Mr Thompson, of this city. He gives his hearty support to the Republican ticket. The General and family leave for Colorado early next week.

MADE A MISTAKE.

WASHINGTON, June 25—The National Republican this morning says: "We think the Democracy has made the same kind of a mistake in this selection of a candidate at Cincinnati as did the Whigs in 1852 in Baltimore, in the nomination of General Scott. In each case the trained statesmen were set aside, because they were statesmen and had a record, and the soldier was taken, not because he was a soldier, not in the spirit of hero-worship, but simply and solely because he was not a statesman. The attempt to hurrah General Scott into the Presidency was a flat failure. The enthusiasm of the brass band politicians was perfectly apparent to the people. The statesmen who had been set aside were hurt and sore that their services to the party and the country were ignored, that their very fame was looked upon as a weakness. The nomination of a soldier, made from the most ignoble motives and as the result of wretched rivalries, was the death knell of the Whig party. The nomination of Hancock came by reason of exactly similar political tactics and beliefs. The result, in our opinion, will follow the parallel already pointed out. Nothing will be gained to the Democracy from ringing the changes upon the war record of their nominee, for the campaign will not turn upon war services. The questions with which they will have to deal will be those to which their candidate is as perfect a stranger as though he had been a resident of Canada."

THE SEVENTH.

The Political Atmosphere Growing Warm in the Seventh District.

LA CROSSE, June 25.—The Republican convention in Monroe county, held at Sparta, duly organized under the Chairman of the Republican county convention, to-day elected six delegates favorable to Joseph G. Thorp, of Eau Claire, for Congressman of the Seventh Congressional district of Wisconsin. The Price delegates withdrew and elected contesting delegations.

The Trempeleau county Republican convention to-day elected delegates favorable to Hon Noah D Comstock, of Arcadia, for Congressman.

WISCONSIN UNIVERSITY.

MADISON, June 25—At a meeting of the Board of Regents of the Wisconsin University, ex Governor Washburne having declined a reelection as President, the Hon George H Paul was elected President, the Hon William E Carter Vice President, and John S Dean Secretary. The standing committees were organized as follows:

Executive Committee—Regents E W Keyes, J C Gregory, and William E Carter.

Farm Committee—Regents H Smith, C C Washburn, and Charles H Parker.

Library—Regents S B Sale, Whiteford, and Koeppen.

Law Department—Regents Gregory, Cassody, and Bingham.

A Chair of Agriculture was temporarily elected, and W A Henry chosen Professor of Agriculture. Prof. E T Birge, of the Chair of Sociology, was granted leave of absence for one year, Mr John Murdock serving as his substitute. A chair of music was created, and F A Parker appointed to fill it. Miss Flora Dodge was appointed tutor to assist Prof Owen in French. C R Vanhize and Magnus Swenzen were awarded tutorships to assist Prof Daniels in chemistry. President Bascom offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That the Executive Committee in conjunction with the President of the University, be authorized to negotiate with the Board of Regents of Normal schools respecting the erection of a Chair of Didactics, and to make necessary arrangements therefor, providing this shall involve no expense to the University.

MORE TROUBLE.

Cadet Whittaker to Demand a Court-Martial.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 25.—Prof. Greener, who acts as the friend of Cadet Whittaker, stated this evening that he should make application to the Secretary of War for a court-martial on behalf of Whittaker, and at Whittaker's instance. This will prevent Whittaker being dropped from the rolls at present, as the Secretary of War would not deprive him of an opportunity to vindicate himself by the verdict of a court martial from the charge of mutilation; but even if he does vindicate himself the indications are that he certainly will be dropped from the rolls on account of deficiencies in studies.

BERNHARDT.

She Is Sentenced in a Paris Court to Pay a Fine of $20,000.

LONDON, June 25—The correspondent of the Herald at Paris telegraphs as follows: The Tribunal of the Seine sentenced Mlle. Sarah Bernhardt to-day to pay a fine of $20,000 and costs. She, moreover, loses the $8,800 standing to her credit in the reserve fund of the Comedie Francaise, with which she, of course, ceases to have any connection. As Mlle. Bernhardt certainly has not one-quarter of $20,000 in the world, I suppose she will have to sell that delightful hotel of hers on the Avenue DeVillies unless Mr. Abbey gallantly comes to her assistance with something on account.

PSESIDENT HAYES.

WASHINGTON, June 25—The President arrived from Ohio this afternoon.

The President will leave to-morrow morning for New Haven, where he will attend the commencement exercises at Yale College, and remain the greater part of next week.

THE NEEDLE.

GIBRALTAR, June 25—The steamer Dessouk, with the obelisk on board, will sail for the United States to-day.

GOLD MEDAL AWARDED.

CINCINNATI, June 25—The gold medal offered by Howard Lockwood, of New York, for a machine, or improvement in milling machine, of the greatest merit, invented within the past ten years, to be exhibited at the Millers' International Exposition, was awarded to George T Smith for a middling purifier.

A TRUANT TWAIN.

Their Adventure at a Leadville Lodging House.

They stepped from one of Barlow & Sanderson's coaches a few days ago and marvelled at the sights and activity surrounding them, concluded to leap into the stream and let their bark pursue its course unconstrained. They saw the sights and night was approaching when they went to the hotel register and there declared that they were not only seniors, but that they had united their destinies by prefixing the Mr and Mrs. This candor was not a little ludicrous to the spectators and decidedly amazing to the clerk, who stroked his greased curls in doubt. He assigned them apartments, when the top of the bell brought a porter and they were conducted through the narrow passageway until the door opened, and they were admitted while the individual of ebony color walked away, overwhelmed with laughter. The week passed on and the board bill was presented. In the meantime the twain had visited various places of amusements, spending money freely and all unconscious that a landlord's bill was awaiting the end of the week. It came, and he was confronted with it. Now $3 per day makes a pretty big pile in a few days, and is surprising how much food a man's molars can destroy, it never being fully realized until the bill is presented. He didn't have the money to pay the bill, when the landlord told him that if it was not forthcoming at a designated time he would be expelled from the house. He had learned of the residence of the miniature husband's father in the meantime and sent a telegram to him, informing him of the predicament of the young couple, and received a reply instructing him to detain them until his arrival. He reached the city yesterday and proceeded to the hotel, where he found the truant pair. He applied the Solomonic lash with vigor to the young gentleman, and the screams that issued from the room testified its effects. The entire party will leave for their home on this morning's coach, the truant twain lamenting their adventure amid the Rocky mountains. They will return to school in the fall, and completing their education they may forget their love.

All Indorse It.

The "Recorder," Americus, Ga., says: "Clerks, Senators, Representatives, Doctors, Lawyers, Citizens, in public and private life, are testifying by the thousands, and over their own signatures, that a remedy has been found for Bright's Disease of the Kidneys and for Diabetes; these are respectively known as Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure and Warner's Safe Diabetes Cure.

A PIRATE STORY.

On the 19th of December, 1823, a trial for piracy, which excited great attention in London and elsewhere, took place before the High Court of Admiralty. The prisoner, who stood arraigned, and who was liable, if convicted, to the penalty of death, had passed through a series of mishaps and adventures stranger than fiction, and only rivaled by the career of some of Dumas' heroes. Involuntarily the associate of a crew of murderers and buccaneers, whose deeds were such as to strike terror into every merchant skipper's heart, the prisoner, Aaron Smith, now stood at a criminal bar, and had to prove to a jury that his companionship among pirates had been compulsory. On that proof his life hung on that sharp December day. To a nation like England, rich in merchant shipping, and deriving from it enormous wealth, the crime of piracy was always a heinous one. Far back as the twenty-eighth year of Henry the Eighth's reign, a statute had made robbery on the high seas punishable with death and loss of lands. When to this robbery murder, in its most cruel form, was added, it is evident that to Englishmen the crime and the criminals became so hateful as to be hunted down on every chance. The reports of the atrocities of the West India sea thieves had come, ever and anon, across the ocean to England, and had roused hate and fear and honest wrath.

The risk which Aaron Smith ran was a very dangerous one. He was acquitted, however, for his story, which during the space of some hours, held court, jury and public enthralled by its interest, was marked by the signs of truth. He called twenty witnesses to testify to his humanity and honesty. The girl to whom he was betrothed, and whose beauty attracted general admiration, proved that their marriage would have long since taken place, had not the prisoner been detained abroad. The tears of the young lady, and the emotion of the prisoner, touched those present as sincere tokens of grief, and Aaron Smith was held a deeply injured man, and set free. He drew up a little volume called "The Atrocities of the Pirates," containing a very simple and unvarnished record of his adventures, and which was published in 1824. In June, 1821, Aaron Smith left in the war ship Harrrington, for the West Indies. There he staid, having left the ship, for some time, engaged in various pursuits, when he became engaged as first mate of the brig Zephyr, a Mr. Lumsden being master. On the 20th of June the voyage to England commenced. Some days brought the brig off Cape St. Antonio, whence she she stood eastward.

On the next day at 2 p. m., a strange schooner stood out from the coast of Cuba toward the Zephyr. The master was informed of this by Smith and one Captain Cowper, a passenger, but obstinately refused to change his course, supposing—I presume, on the civis-Romanus principle—that as he bore the English flag, none would molest him. Mr. Lumsden was doomed to be harshly undeceived. The grim schooner came on swiftly, her decks full of men and lowered boats. Next came a hoarse order to lay-to, enforced by a volley of musketry, which increased the rising terror of the Zephyr's master. The brig was now boarded by the pirates' boats, which were filled with armed men. The chief, a ferocious fellow, staid in the schooner, and had Lumsden, Cowper, Smith, and others brought before him on his deck. His questions, in broken English, as to cargo, etc., were enforced by threats of burning the Zephyr and every soul belonging to her if the truth was not told. Smith was informed by the pirate captain that he would be kept to investigate the schooner. The mate entreated to be released, and drew a harrowing picture of an imaginary wife and children longing for his return; but all in vain. Ultimately he was forced to go on board the brig, collect his property and necessaries for navigation, and return to his new master. In the interim Lumsden and Cowper were lashed to the pumps, and combustibles placed around them and fired, to extort a confession as to hidden treasure. The pirates plundered the brig, and Smith was driven at the point of the knife into the pirate schooner, and saw the brig and his companions sail off, leaving him in captivity.

In due course, the schooner touched at harbor—Rio Medias—where an evident understanding existed between the pirates and the Spanish magistrates, and where a dance took place between the crew and the fair ladies of the neighborhood at the chief magistrate's house. Our hero, compelled to share in the festivities, made the acquaintance of a young Spanish beauty, Seraphina, who seems to have excited a reciprocal attachment in his heart. These Arcadian delights of music and dancing and hobnobbing of Spanish authorities with corsairs, were followed by the sale on board the schooner of the brig's cargo, the love making on Smith's part to Seraphina, and his promises of marriage if she would aid his escape, and wound up by a furious fight between two of the pirates, one being stabbed. Smith was ordered, despite his protestations, to act as surgeon, the captain admitting no plea of ignorance, and the unhappy captive had to stanch and bandage as best he could. The cause of the quarrel was investigated. One wounded man informed his captain that the other had formed a plot to assassinate him. The crew simultaneously rushed down, cut off the poor wretch's legs and arms with a blunt hatchet, and threw him overboard. Such was Smith's first experience of pirate customs, and while he still shuddered, the captain told him this would be his fate if he concealed information from him.

The schooner cruised out to sea, and at last came back to harbor. Out to meet her came the chief mate, with that portion of the crew who had been left behind. Th se were implicated in the assassination plot. A white handkerchief was held up to decoy them, and, when close, a volley fired among them. But one man survived, and he was doomed by the captain to die in the favorite fiend like manner of the Cuban pirates For three hours a boat's crew was occupied in rowing up and down a narrow bush fringed channel, the unhappy victim being stripped naked and pinioned in the boat, while myriads of mosquitoes and sand flies hovered round and closed on his flesh. Says Smith: "We had been scarcely half an hour in this place when the miserable victim was distracted with pain; his body began to swell, and he appeared one complete blister from head to foot." His voice failed, his features became undistinguishable, and in this condition they brought him back. The captain had the boat moored, and ordered six muskets to be fired at the dying man. He only fainted A pig of iron was fastened round his neck, and he was flung into the sea.

So ended this specimen of vengeance; and next came the turn of Aaron Smith to feel the captain's cruelty. Refusing to board a merchant's brig, the rage of the corsair was so great with his captive, that he had him tied to the mast, a circle of gunpowder strewn around him, a train laid and a match applied to it. The blaze burst up, lapped the unhappy man in its embrace, and, his clothes all on fire, he fell insensible Recovering, he found himself unable to move, both hands and legs lacerated, and, in fact, the bones lay bare, and large blisters on various parts of his body.

Compassion was excited in the heart of one of the crew, who showed kindness and attention to the unfortunate prisoner. The latter in the pain he was, was made to make sails, to act as surgeon, and even to mount the rigging, by the captain, whose brief fits of humanity ended in bursts of ferocious threats. About this time a collision occurred, between some survivors of the "chief mate's" gang (who lurked in the woods near the harbor in which the schooner constantly made her headquarters) and the crew. The friendly magistrate, before referred to, was wounded, and the mutilated Smith was carried on a mattress two miles inland to the house, to dress the official's wounds. Here he saw the charming daughter, Seraphina, again, and hopes of escape were indulged in by both. To lull suspicion, he affected reluctance to go ashore, which produced compulsion. One day, on his return, one of the "gang" was captured by the boat's crew, exposed to the sand-flies, half maddened, blindfolded, tied to a tree and shot, ere their return to their approaching captain and comrades.

Other unhappy traitors were made targets of, tied to trees, and bets were indulged in as to hitting or missing them. All these things Smith was compelled to witness silently, on peril of his life, which his own maimed, tortured limbs forcibly reminded him of his captor's state of mind. A Dutch vessel was next captured, and her cargo taken, while Smith was made to act as surgeon. About this time he met with Seraphina, on one of his visits to her father, and was overjoyed to learn she had arranged matters for their flight. Some days elapsed, the feverish hope in the prisoner's mind making him unable to remain quiet. While thus on tender hooks, he witnessed another scene of murder. The French cook of the Dutch vessel, teased by his captors, seized a hatchet, and wounded one. The rest simultaneously plunged their knives into his body, and flung him, still breathing, overboard. Again Smith was made to become the injured pirate's surgeon. Two more prizes were taken, and then the famous Rio grew too hot to hold the pirates. Five gunboats were ordered down by the Governor of Havana, a fact of which the friendly magistrate duly informed the pirate captain. The corsair eluded the flotilla [which seems to have shown little zeal will to capture her] and remained for three weeks off the Morilla, where she captured a French vessel. The pirates plundered her cut away her mizzen-mast and starboard main rigging, and in this condition magnanimously turned her adrift to pursue her voyage.

Returned to the old anchorage—the storm having blown over—the schooner lay inactive. The pirate captain (who, by the way, according to his crew's account, had murdered twenty men with his own hand) fell ill.

Smith forced to prescribe, put an opiate into some arrowroot; and while the captain slumbered and the crew got drunk, stole into the cabin of some fishermen who were on board, cut her loose, and steered for Havana. Two nights and a day in this frail cockleshell, he traversed the ocean, while as he says, "the wind blew from the southwest, and, what appeared to me to be a special providence, continued to do so the whole day—a thing very unusual in that climate." He reached Havana, and after boarding a ship commanded by an old acquaintance, went ashore. Recognized by a Spanish officer who had been a prisoner on board the schooner, the unfortunate man was seized and flung into a dungeon swarming with vermin, and kept prisoner for five weeks, though a few comforts were got for him by a friendly Spaniard. He was then handed over to a British Admiral, who, he complains, had him put in double irons. He seems to have been treated with great severity. During the whole voyage he was, although freed from fetters, kept with a sentry over him to prevent his speaking to any one. On arrival home he was taken to London, committed for trial, indicted, tried and acquitted, the story of which we have given the outline being so evidently true as to convince all that Aaron Smith's career of suffering and hardship was involuntary, and that his pirate adventures were as unavoidable as remarkable in the history of the seas.

THE READY FAMILY SOAP MAKER:

LEWIS' LYE

98 PER CENT. PURE.

(Patented.)

FINELY POWDERED.

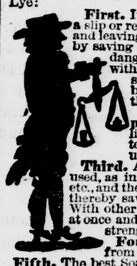

HIGHLY PERFUMED.

The strongest and purest Lye made. Will make 12 pounds of the best Perfumed Hard Soap in 20 minutes without boiling.

The best water-softener made.

The best disinfectant.

The following are some of the advantages obtained by using Lewis' 98 Per Cent. Powdered Lye:

First. It is packed in an iron can with a slip or removable lid, easily taken off and leaving the contents exposed, thereby saving the trouble, annoyance, and danger (from flying particles), as with other Lyes, which, being solid in the cans, must be broken with a hammer to get the Lye out.

Second. It being a fine powder, you can remove the lid and pour out all the contents, being always ready for use.

Third. A teaspoonful or more can be used, as in water-softening, scrubbing, etc., and the lid returned to the can, and thereby save the balance of contents. With other Lyes all must be dissolved at once and used in a short time, or the strength is gone.

Fourth. Absolute purity. Free from all adulterations.

Fifth. The best Soap can be made in from ten to twenty minutes with this Lye.

Sixth. No failure is possible in making Soap with this Lye when the simple directions given are followed.

Seventh. One can of this Powdered Lye is equal to twenty pounds of Sal Soda or Washing Soda.

Eighth. One can of this Lye will saponify one pound more of grease than any other Concentrated Lye, Ball Potash, or Saponifier.

Ninth. This Lye is 2% per cent. stronger than any other Lye or Potash.

Tenth. One to two teaspoonfuls will soften a tub of the hardest water.

Eleventh. One teaspoonful will thoroughly cleanse Sinks, Drains, or Closets.

Invaluable for killing Roaches, Mice, Rats, etc. The best article for washing Trees.

DR. HOWE'S TESTIMONY.

PITTSFIELD, ME., March, 1872.

MR. JAMES I. FELLOWS,

Dear Sir—During the past two years, I have given your Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites a fair though somewhat severe trial in my practice, and am able to speak with confidence of its effects. In restoring persons suffering from emaciation and the debility following Diptheria, it has done wonders. I constantly recommend its use in all affections of the throat and lungs. In several cases considered hopeless, it has given relief, and the patients are fast recovering. Among these are consumptive and old bronchial subjects, who's diseases have resisted the other modes of treatment. For impaired digestion, and in fact for debility from any cause, I know of nothing equal to it. Its direct effect in strengthening the nervous system, renders it suitable for the majority of diseases.

I am, sir, yours truly. WM. S. HOWE, M. D.

Head, nerves, kidneys, bladder, womb, and blood affections of the urinary organs, gravel, scrofula, rheumatism, catarrh, asthma, bronchitis, dyspepsia, &c.

Dr. Price's reputation has been acquired by candid, honest dealing and years of successful practice.

My practice not one of experiment, but founded on the laws of Nature, with years of experience and evidence to sustain it, does not tear down, make sick to make well; no harsh treatment, no trifling, no flattering. We know the cause and the remedy needed; no guess work, but knowledge gained by years of experience in the treatment of Chronic diseases exclusively; no encouragement without a prospect. Candid in our opinions, reasonable in our charges, claim not to know everything, or care everybody, but do lay claim to reason and common sense. We invite the sick, no matter what their ailment, to call and investigate before they abandon hope, make interrogations and decide for yourselves; it will cost nothing as consultation is free. THE GAZETTE.

SATURDAY, JUNE 26, 1880.

RUBINSTEIN AND THE RUSTIC.

He Wouldn't Let the Old Pianner Go.

Well, sir, he had the blamedest, biggest, catt-corneredest pianner you ever laid eyes on; something like a distracted billiard table on three legs. The lid was hoisted, and it was mighty well it was. If it hadn't been, he'd a tore the entire inside clean out and scattered them to the four winds of heaven.

Played well? You bet he did; but don't interrupt. When he first sit down he 'peared to keer mighty little 'bout playin', and wished he hadn't come. He tweedle-leed-ed a little on the treble, and twoodle-oodled a little on the bass, just foolin' and boxin' the thing's jaws for bein' in his way. An I says to a man settin' next to me, says I: "What sort of fool playin' is that?" And he says: "Heish!" But presently his hands commenced chasin' each other up and down the keys, like a parcel of rats scamperin' through a garret very swift. Parts of it were very sweet, and reminded me of a sugar squirrel turning the wheel of a candy cage.

"Now," says I to my neighbor, "he's showing off. He thinks he's a doing it, but he ain't got no idee, no plan of nothin'. If he'd play me a tune of some kind or other, I'd—"

But my neighbor says "Heish!" very impatient.

I was just about to git up and go home, bein' tired of that foolishness, when I heard a little bird wakin' up away off in the woods, and call sleepy-like to his mate, and I looked up and see that Ruby was beginning to take some interest in this business, and I sit down again. It was the peep of day. The light came faint from the East, the breezes blowed gentle and fresh, some more birds waken up in the orchard, then some more in the trees near the house, and all begun singin' together. People began to stir, and the gal opened the shutters. Just then the first beam of the sun, fell upon the blossoms a leetle more, and it techt the roses upon the bushes and the next thing it was broad day; the sun fairly blazed, the birds sung like they'd split their little throats; all the leaves were movin', and flashin' diamonds of dew, and the whole wide world was bright and happy as a king. Seemed to me like there was a good breakfast in every house in the land, and not a sick child or woman anywhere. It was a fine mornin'

And I says to my neighbor: "That's music, that is."

But he glared at me like he'd like to cut my throat.

Presently the wind turned; it began to thicken up, and a kind of gray mist came over things; I got low-spirited directly. Then a silver rain began to fall. I could see the drops touch the ground; some flashed up like long pearl ear rings, and the rest roll'ed away like round rubies. It was pretty, but melancholy. Then the pearls gathered themselves into long strands and necklaces, and then melted into thin silver streams, running between golden gravels, and then the streams joined each other at the bottom of the hill, and made a brook that flooded silent, except that you could see the music, especially when the bushes on the bank moved as the music went along down the valley. I could smell the flowers in the meadow. But the sun didn't shine, nor the birds sing; it was a foggy day, but not cold.

The most curious thing was the little white angel boy, like you see in the pictures, that ran ahead of the music brook, and let it on and on, away out of the world, where no man ever was certain. I could see the boy just as I see you. Then the moonlight came without any sunset, and shone on the graveyards, where some few ghosts lifted their hands and went over the wall, and between the black, shary-top trees, splendid marble houses rose up, with fine ladies in the lit up windows, and men that loved 'em but could never get near 'em, who played on guitars under the trees, and made me that miserable I could have cried, because I wanted to love Somebody, I don't know who, better than the men with the guitars did.

Then the sun went down and it got dark, the wind moaned and wept like a lost child for its dear mother, and I could a got up then and preached a better sermon than I ever listened to. There wasn't a thing left in the world to live for, not a blamed thing, and yet I didn't want the music to stop one bit. It was happier to be miserable than to be happier without being miserable. I couldn't understand it. I hung my head and pulled out my handkerchief, and blowed my nose loud to keep me from crying. My eyes is weak, anyway; I didn't want any one to be a gazin' at me a-sniviln', and it's nobody's business what I do with my nose. It's mine. But some several glanced at me mad as blazes. Then, all of a sudden, old Rubin changed his tune. He ripped out and he rared, an' he tipped and he tared, he pranced and he charged like the grand entry at the circus. 'Peared to me all the gas in the house was turned on at once, things got so bright, and I held up my head, ready to look any man in the face, and not afraid of nothin'. It was a circus, and a brass band, and a big ball all going on at once. It hit into them keys like a thousand of brick; he gave 'em no rest day or night; he set every livin' joint in me a-going, and not being able to stand it any longer, I jumped, sprang into my seat, and jest hollered:

"Go it Rube!"

Every blamed man, woman and child in the house riz on me and shouted, "Put him out! put him out!"

"Put your great-grandmother's grizzly gray greenish cat into the middle of next month!" I says. "Tech me if you dare. I paid my money, and you jest come a-nigh me!"

With that some several policemen ran up and I had to simmer down. But I could a-fit any fool that laid hands on me, for I was bound to hear Ruby out or die.

He had changed his tune again. He hop light ladies and tip-toed fine from end to end of the key board. He played soft and low and solemn. I heard the church bells over the hills. The candles of heaven was lit, one by one I saw the stars rise. The great organ of eternity began to play from the world's end, and all the angels went to prayers. Then the music changed to water, full of feeling that couldn't be thought, and began to drop—drip—drop—drip—drop—clear and sweet, like tears of joy falling into a lake of glory! It was sweeter than that. It was as sweet as a sweetheart sweetened with white sugar, mixed with powdered sugar and seed diamonds. It was too sweet. I tell you the audience cheered. Rubin he kinder bowed, like he wanted to say, "Much obleeged, but I rather you wouldn't interrupt me."

He stopt a moment or two to ketch breath. Then he got mad. He run his fingers throug his hair, he shoved up his sleeve, he opened his coat tails a little further, he drug his stool, he leaned over, and, sir, he just went for that pianner. He slapt her face, he boxed he jaws, he pulled her nose, he pinched hers ears, and he scratched her face until she fairly yelled. He knockt her down and stampt on her shameful. She bellowed, she bleated like a calf, she howled like a hound she squealed like a pig she shrieked like a rat and then he wouldn't let her up. He ran a quarter sketch down the low grounds of the base, till he got clear in the bowels of the earth, and you heard thunder galloping after thunder, through the hollow and caves of perdition; and then he fox-chased his right hand with his left till he got away out of the treble into the clouds, whar the notes was finer than the pints of cambric needles, and you couldn't hear nothin' but the shadders of 'em. And then he wouldn't let the old pianner go. He for'ard two'd, he crost over first gentleman, he chassade right and left back to your places, he all-hands-arounded, ladies to the right, promenade all, in and out, here and there, back and forth, up and down, perpetual motion, double twisted and turned and tacked and tangled into forty-eleven thousand double bow-knots.

By jinks! it was a mixtery. And then he wouldn't let the old pianner go. He fecht up his right wing, he fecht up his left wing, he fecht up his centre, he fired by platoons, by company, by regiments and by brigades. He opened his cannon—siege guns down there, Napoleons here, twelve pounders yonder—big guns, little guns, middle-sized guns, round shot, shells, shrapnels, grape, canister, mortar, mines and magazines, every livin' battery a-goin' at the same time. The house trembled, the lights danced, the walls shuk, the floor came up, the ceilin' came down, the sky split, the ground rockt—heavens and earth, creation, sweet potatoes, Moses, ninepence, glory, ten-penny nails, Sampson in a simmon tree, Tump Thompson in a tumbler-cart, roodle-oodle-coodle-oodle—ruddle-uddle-uddle-uddle—raddle addle-addle-addle—riddle-iddle-iddle-iddle—reedle-eedle-eedle—p-r-r-rland! Bang! lang! periang! p-r-r-r-r! Bang!

With that bang! he lifted himself bodily into the air, and he came down with his ten fingers, his ten toes, his elbows and his nose, striking every solitary key on the pianner at the same time. The thing busted and went off into the seventeen hundred and fifty-seven thousand five hundred and forty two hemi-demi-semi-quivers, and I know'd no more.

FASHIONABLE TOPICS.

Timely Notes on the Freaks that Fashion Plays.

Spanish lace is very much worn.

White is the festival dress of 1880.

Black silks and cashmeres are never out of fashion.

Sunshades of Scotch ginghams are made to match suits.

Ragusa lace is a machine-made imitation of antique point.

All kinds of wash goods are made up with a great deal of shirring.

A lady writer in The Queen recommends the gossamer waterproofs "imported from America," as excellent for yachting tours.

Heliotropes, pansies, dandelions, carnations, gilliflowers, buttercups and rosebuds and mignonette, are fashionable bouquet and bonnet flowers.

Among dressy summer bonnets this season are many with brims of Tuscan straw and soft crowns of dammasse silk, trimmed with flowers or feathers and wide strings of satin.

Instead of woolen breakfast shawls there are now large squares of India foulard, in bright colors, and gay patterns, edged with Languedoc and Ragusa laces put on slightly full.

Shirring is now more used than at any previous season for the front of dress skirts. A new style is shirred horizontally in wide clusters instead of lengthwise, as was formerly the fashion.

Panels at the side of skirts are now more often pleated than plain. The pleats are lengthwise side pleats, and sometimes one large round knot is tied on these pleats half way down the skirt. Shirred panels are also used.

The latest novelty for lawn, garden and conservatory ornament is the gypsy flower pot, which consists of an iron pot painted red, banded with gilded stripes, and suspended from a wooden tripod seven feet in height, united seven inches from the top by a gilded ball, from which hangs the bronzed chain that suspends the pot.

The new fashion for finishing the back of basques is to divide them below the waists into two, four or five spaces, let each hang straight and separate, catch the end in gathers and add a tassel at each point. Sometimes a ball of jet is put on the points of grenadine or silk dresses instead of a tassel. If the skirt has a full shirred back thus open basques display it prettily.

A popular make in French dresses has the front and sides of the skirt of fine wide box pleats; these have eyelets worked in the edges and are laced down with silk cords terminating in tassels. A contrast of color is necessary in these: thus an ecru dress will have dark green cord, while navy blue has red eyelets, cords and tassels. The blue Jersey bodice worn with the latter would be laced with red.

Those who wish to remodel their last year's dresses cannot do better than retrim them with either red or orange surah, which brightens up dark costumes effectively, and on fabrics of light quality it is fast replacing satin, just as figured foulards are replacing heavy brocades on summer dresses. The soft twilled silk of bright hue, looks stylish between the pleats of dark woolen skirts and also as wide bands alternating with box pleats.

Foulard handkerchiefs instead of cambric ones are made into cravat bows. The new style is to fold the kerchief through the middle each way, making a square, and then turn over in a point the corner which is made of the middle of the handkerchief. A gay little brooch is fastened into this turned over revers, and the cravat is finished. This is very pretty with a heliotrope or pale blue handkerchief with white embroidered border edged with lace.

FORECLOSURE SALE.—State of Wisconsin in Circuit Court for Rock County.—George Gordon, plaintiff, against Marcellus E. Collins, Belden F. Culver, Abraham Grow, Eli G. Runals and Helen C. Runals, his wife, William R. Smith and —— Smith, his wife, defendants:

By virtue and in pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale duly made and entered in the above entitled action in the Circuit Court for Rock County aforesaid on the 22d day of May, A. SATURDAY, JUNE 26, 1880.

Official Paper of the City and County.

BRIEFLETS.

—Primp up and point for the pews.

—D. G. Marsh and brother, of Clinton, were in the city to-day.

—The stalwart form and jolly face of Col. Noyes, of Texas, is again seen upon our streets.

—Two more tramps from Beloit have taken up their quarters in the jail here for five days.

—Hon. John Winans returned from Cincinnati last evening, and seems joyous over the result of the convention.

—Miss May Patterson returned last evening from Chicago, where she has been furthering her musical culture.

—There will be a song and praise service at the First Methodist church to-night, the special topic being "Congregational Singing."

—Rev. Jenk Ll. Jones is to address the people of Turtle in the Town Hall, Sunday afternoon, July 4, at 3 o'clock p. m., on "A Neglected Patriot."

—G. Fred Selleck has returned from Davenport, and reports his brother as haying so far recovered as to be able to proceed on to Washington.

—Dr. Palmer's examination of the injuries received by John W. Smith, who works for Mr. Hugunin, revealed the fact that two ribs were broken.

—The school children will take a rest now from having their ideas taught how to shoot, and will spend their time in shooting "mibs" and "pops."

—Frank R. Morris, who has been King's right hand man in the bookstore, is going to get out from behind the counter, and devote himself to the printers trade.

—Mary Mulcairns, who tried to keep Officer Smith from driving her cow into the pound, was this morning fined $1 and costs, in all amounting to about $6. A warning to others.

—Moseley has for sale tickets to the Senior concert at Beloit, but the sale will close Monday noon. Remenyi is enough of a card to draw a crowd, and Miss Simms is an excellent attraction.

—Joshua Hoskins has returned from Texas, and has not fully decided whether he will return there or not. He speaks some words of praise for that country and its industries, but says it's a wild place after all.

—Arrangements are being made by which the picnic to be held on July 5, for the benefit of Father Doyle, will be made an immense success and enjoyable to all. If you want to celebrate in a happy way take the picnic in.

—Rev. A. J. Mead, the new Presiding Elder of this district of the Methodist church, has rented a house, corner of Bluff and Terrace streets, and expects to take possession at once, his household goods having already arrived from Oshkosh.

—Sutherland & Sons have some excellent portraits of General Garfield, and the price is such as to place the pictures within the reach of all. They are pronounced as excellent likenesses of the Republican nominee, and will be eagerly sought for.

—The move for a side track to better accommodate the factories and mills, is not dead. Estimates are being made as to the expense, the right of way is being secured provisionally, and other steps taken as preliminary to a final arrangement of plans.

—The park looks like a park now. The settees which have been placed there were well patronized last evening, and with the fences down, ladies and gentlemen sitting quietly chatting there, and children busy with frolics, the park looks like a new place instead of an old landmark.

—Mr. George Kimball, of St. Louis, and his daughter, Mrs. Theodore Conant, arrived last night, and are making their headquarters at the home of Mr. S. D. Conant. Mr. Kimball will make only a brief stay, perhaps until Monday, but Mrs. Conant will visit here for some time.

—The commencement exercises of Beloit college commence to-morrow with the Baccalaureate sermon by President Chapin, in the morning, and in the evening an address before the Missionary Association by Rev. D. D. Hill, of Aurora, Illinois. Monday evening Rev. Dr. Thomas, of Chicago, gives an address.

—A new business block has been built on the Corn Exchange triangle. It consists of a dry goods box, with an old umbrella for an awning, and a thin faced young man as a store keeper, who gathered his audience last night by slight-of-hand tricks, and imitations of the mocking bird, and then gathered in their nickles in return for his wares.

—Two hotel runners, while waiting for the train to come in, lopped down in their carryall, and overcome by the sultriness of the day, dropped into a sleep. Even the rumbling of the train, as it rolled into the station did not arouse them, and the runners of other hotels had the thing their own way and gobbled up all the patronage, and drove off with them in gleeful victory, leaving their rivals slumbering in their innocence. At last one determined passenger, who was set on going to that hotel and no other, went to them, shook them up, and induced them to let him ride. It was a complete surprise party on them, and now just before going to a train they drink strong tea.

—Now if you really want to get in a cool place don't sit around on the steps in your shirt sleeves, but get one of those lawn settees or lawn chairs, which Britton & Kimball have for sale, and when you get into one of those you needn't sacrifice style to comfort nor comfort to style. They are beauties, and cheap too, and every well regulated lawn cries for them. And then for inside the house, there are those refrigerators. With one of these you can keep a chunk of Iceland winter in your house all the time. About the only way to enjoy life this hot weather is to go to Britton & Kimball's and let them stock you up on these conveniences.

Universally acknowledged the best, Astor House, New York.

A HAND CRIPPLED.

Albert Watson, while at work at the Harris works yesterday met with rather a serious accident, by getting his right hand in too close contact with a buzzsaw. A portion of his thumb was speedily sawed off, and a bad cut made between the thumb and forefinger, extending clear to the bone. That hand won't be good for much for a while, but is thought will come out all right in time.

THE WEATHER.

REPORTED BY PRENTICE & EVENSON DRUGGISTS.

The thermometer at 6 o'clock last evening stood at 84 degrees above; at 1 o'clock a. m. to-day at 67 degrees above; at 7 o'clock a. m. at 72 degrees above, and at 1 o'clock p. m, at 86 degrees above. Clear.

The indications to-day are for the upper lake region, warmer, clear and partly cloudy weather, variable winds, rising, followed by stationary or falling barometer.

ENLARGING THE CAPITAL.

Last evening the stockholders of the Wisconsin Shoe Company met, and decided to increase the capital stock of the company to $100,000. There was $30,000 of this stock which was taken at once and paid for in full, and the amount will give an increase to the business, which is already in a healthy state of growth. The Company has been meeting with great success, and so confident are all interested, that the enterprise can be made still more prosperous, by extending its borders, that additional capital is easily secured. The number of employes will be increased, and the amount of goods manufactured will be swelled to meet the demands of the growing trade. It is already an enterprise which reflects credit upon the city, and with the additional capital, greater things than these will be done.

CRUMBS FROM COLUMBUS.

What a Janesville Man Has to Say of that City and Its People.

COLUMBUS, Wis., June 25—This is a fine city of two thousand inhabitants, located in the southeastern part of Columbia county, on the Crawfish river, with a very fine farming country around it, and some very wealthy farmers. It is twelve miles southeast of Beaver Dam, twenty miles northwest of Watertown, on the La Crosse division of the C. M. & St. Paul R. R., which is the most prominent division of the St. Paul Company; and its passenger trains the past month have been loaded with emigrants for the Northwest. A large share of them were from Norway. Columbus is noted for its fine streets, shaded with large tree; fine residences and nice lawns in front, and a strict ordinance against cattle running at large.

This is the home of our estimable War-Governor, James T. Lewis, who owns a fine residence here, and a large farm outside the city, which I had the pleasure of viewing from the highway a few days ago, through his kind invitation. The ex-Governor does not meddle with politics much, but takes a great interest in the success of the Republican party, is of the stalwart kind, and an admirer of our next President, General Garfield, whom we all will delight to honor with our ballots next November.

Columbus has ten fine churches, good school buildings and schools and some very fine business blocks, two banks, two hotels, the Fox house and the Cooper house, and the latter is one of the best houses in Wisconsin. The society is first class and there are a great many young people, especially ladies, and they try to make all strangers at home. I attended a social dancing party of the elite last night. Although the weather was quite warm, I enjoyed it very much as they were bound I should. Columbus has two good weekly papers one the Columbus Democrat—the other the Columbus Republican. The Editor of the Democrat, Mr. H. D. Bath, died about a week ago and his wife manages the paper. Mr. Bath was called a very able writer by all who knew him.

The firm of McKey & Bro., who have a store here, move to Beaver Dam July 1st, to make that enterprising summer resort happy.

We are having a slight shower to-day, which is needed to settle the dust and cool off the weather, but grain could get along for a while yet without rain. Grains of all kinds are looking splendid, and the prospects are fine for a bountiful harvest. Let us know when your new railroads are finished, that we may come home to the excursion. More anon. Some of the Readers of the Gazette

May think, owing to our silence on the subject this Spring, that we have gone out of the Merchant Tailoring business. Sorry we couldn't have invited you to call before, but our business in this department, ever since last February, has been so great that we have been unable to procure a sufficient number of Journeymen Tailors to fill orders, and have turned away a large number of customers who were in a hurry for garments. We do not expect this trade to last all Summer, but as we are anxious to keep the ball rolling, and get rid of as many Spring Woolens as possible, we shall from this date reduce prices on all light weight goods to order.

Those who are not already provided will please make a note of this, as the warm weather is yet to come.

We have been continually receiving new styles of goods and the stock will be found very well assorted at
